a tour through...
stopbullying.gov

StopBullying.gov is a federal website that provides information from various government agencies on what bullying and cyberbullying are, and who is at risk. Learn more about this great resource to understand, prevent, and respond to bullying.

Bullying

- what it is
- who is at risk
- the effects
- and what to do

What to Do

- bystanders become upstanders
- the do's and don'ts of responding
- get help when needed

Prevention

- know what bullying is
- be inclusive and kind
- report bullying and cyberbullying

Blogs

- new resources
- disabilities
- sports
- eating disorders

StopBullying.gov also includes resources for parents, teachers, and other adults working with kids.

Training Center – Webinars, presentations, and other resources that highlight best practices – some with continuing education credit!

Research Resources – Research-based fact sheets, research summaries, and infographics to deepen your understanding of bullying and its prevention.

State Laws and Policies – An interactive map showing the most current bullying and cyberbullying policies in each U.S. state and territory.

Scan This QR Code!